Rebecca Brambila Instructor Biography

As a multi-lingual individual, Rebecca greatly enjoys the variety, excitement, and opportunity that comes with communicating in different languages. She grew up in a home where a variety of other languages were heard and used, including Eastern Cherokee, Italian, French, American Sign Language, and of course Spanish. After a mission trip to Guatemala at age 13, Rebecca truly caught the “Spanish bug” and became fluent within two years, continuing to visit and work in ministry in Guatemala for the next 9 years. This opened the door for many translating and teaching opportunities, as well the chance to help lead worship for Spanish-speaking churches in the United States. Rebecca received a Bachelor of Music from Liberty University, also completing the coursework and all practicums for an education degree and K-12 licensure. Her Master’s courses include score analysis, theory and composition. She has taught music both privately and in public and private schools for over 20 years, and has taught small groups and tutored Spanish students. Rebecca considers herself to be a lifetime language learner, and is currently studying Arabic and German. Her husband Carlos is a native Spanish speaker from Mexico, and they speak exclusively in Spanish and Eastern Cherokee at home with their son.
